

FEEDBACK

Dear Urban Animal,

I just wanted to let you know that the column on getting your dog back at the park in the last edition was really helpful. I've been struggling with this for a while now and we're getting some success. Thanks. – S. LEWIS

Dear Urban Animal,

Can anyone help me with what pet insurance we should get? It's really confusing as to what to look for and there are so many new pet insurance companies.

– M. VAN DER VEEN

Editor: Hi there.

It is really confusing in what to choose and our Spring edition will have a Pet Insurance article.

A few years back, there were only a couple to choose from and now there seems to be a new product every couple of months. Choice, the consumer magazine, did a comparison at the end of last year – that may help you until our article comes out. Best of luck and happy researching!

You have been doing an excellent job.

I've always looked forward to the next edition.

The dogs love the treats too. – K. HOBART.

Could you please have more bird stories rather than just health related.

It would be nice to see more parrots in the magazine. – P. PICCOLO.

Is there anyway we can get information on upcoming stories in future editions?

– M. CHANGO

Editor: Yes. You can send us an email info@urbananimal.net and we can add you to the subscribers who get emails. You can opt out at any time and it's free.

URBAN ANIMAL'S WRITERS' COMPETITION 2012

Submissions are invited for this short story contest which is open to everyone who is a legal resident of Australia. Entries should be pet-centric and written from the human point of view. The theme for this contest is "The Most Embarrassing Thing My Pet Has Ever Done".

For full details of the contest and rules please go to:

www.urbananimal.net/writingcomp

The cut-off date for submissions is 1 November, 2012 and entries received after this date will not be eligible. The winner will have their entry published in Urban Animal (at a date to be solely at the discretion of Urban Animal) and will be notified by email and/or phone.
